A HELLO FROM BROOMFIELD!

Hello everyone

Two weeks left! It has been very strange over the last few months and it doesn't at all feel like the end of term—even for those of us in school. It all feels a bit weird really.

This week you will get your school report and it also will tell you who your teacher is next year. Next week your work will be based around transition and completing work for your new teacher. Our teachers are creating short videos for you to watch as well as sharing stories with you. More information about your work to follow on Monday.

This week is the start of National Art week for children. The theme for this week is 'The Natural World'. Why not create a piece of art linked to this and upload it to your teacher.

More information about this event can be found at:

<https://engage.org/happenings/childrens-art-week/>

There are some brilliant examples of the art that you have already created on our website in the gallery section. Many of you have also learnt new skills such as bike riding, baking and crochet. Have a look and see if any of your amazing work is there.

READING BOOK RETURN:

Before we closed in March we gave each of you at least 2 reading books. We are currently re-organising the library and would appreciate it if you could drop them off at the school entrance and place them in the box by the end of the week. When ready, these can then be added to our libraries.

Your teachers have chosen their Stars of the week.

Congratulations to:

Mrs Waldrom - Callum B & Ivy S
Miss Chapman- Joshua C & Kimberley M
Mrs Parish/Mrs Bond— Archie E-D & Izzy P
Miss Trowbridge— George W & Charlie W

A HELLO FROM BROOMFIELD!

Messages for families...

Dear all

Firstly I would like to thank the families involved for their swift action in collecting their children and patience when we needed to close two bubble groups last week. It has been greatly appreciated!

This week your children will receive their school report. We are sending them out by email from Wednesday and all children should have received them by the end of the week. It does look very different and is shorter than normal. The covering letter explains our judgements and also tells you who your child's teacher is for next year.

There is a new transition tab on the home page of the website—this is for next year. By the end of the week on your child's class transition page will be a video/videos of the teacher introducing themselves, showing the classroom environment, explaining about new entrances etc. as well as sharing some of the topics they will be learning next year. The staff will also be sharing a story with the children too.

Next week the majority of the work sent out by the teachers on Tapestry/Seesaw will be transition activities. It will be sent by their current teacher but will be read and reviewed by their next one.

We are currently finalising the processes for returning to school in August and this may still involve slightly staggered starts and pick ups. We aim for school to look and feel as normal as possible for the children but welcoming everybody back in one go needs some thought and there will be some safeguards that we need to keep in place. All of this will be shared with you before we finish next week and confirmed over the summer to allow for any Government changes/responses to the changing situation.

The virtual register below will be the last one for this term. At the end there is a section about holidays. This is aimed at finding out how many children are going abroad during August and may not be back at the start if term if quarantine procedures are in place based on the country visited.

Thank you again for your support—take care please.

Miss Allison

RSE Policy update

Over the next year the new Relationships and Sex Education curriculum will become compulsory for schools to teach. Our draft policy is on the school website in the Statutory information section under policies. Please can you read and send any comments via the office email by Thursday 9th July.

Many thanks
